

Home / Auto Shows / New York

2014 New York Auto Show Hits and Misses

By Joe DeMatio, Joe Lorio, Georg Kacher, Greg Migliore

Share

🕒 Apr 18, 2014

NEW YORK -- One of the least car-friendly cities in the nation nevertheless hosts an important international auto show. While Ford attempted to direct attention to the Mustang it built atop the Empire State Building, we spent two days perusing the many new production and concept cars on display at the Javits Convention Center. Here are our favorites, as well as some duds.

HIT – e-Carriage

Here in New York City, there is a vocal lobby against the city's venerable horse-drawn carriages, largely animal rights activists who have the new mayor's ear. This has spurred talk of banning the horse carriages and replacing them with electric vehicles styled as ersatz "antiques." This one, Creative Workshop's e-Carriage, is the first we'd seen, and looked surprisingly well made and authentic, a pleasant change from most replica antique cars, which often look absurdly fake. - Kitman

